Hongkong, January 15th, 1875.

There are few countries with resources so undeveloped as those of Formosa. The "Beautiful Island" abounds in extensive and wellwatered plains, whose fertility is unsurpassed. Vegetation is exceptionally luxuriant, and the crops succeed each other with wonderful rapidity. Nearly every production of the tropies can be grown there, and fruits abound in great variety. Its climate is salubrious and degrees in the winter to 90 in the summer. In spring there are genial showers, and during the greater part of the year fresh breezes prevail and temper the heat. The scenery is in many parts grand and imposing; some of its mountains attain an altitude of upwards of 11,000 feet. It produces rice, sugar, tea, tobacco, indigo, turmeric, camphor, coal, and Mr. Sassoon, during his stay in the Colony, has 55 note that night, and by others at the Home, sulphur, and it is believed by some that gold exists on the island. It may without exaggeration be said of Formosa that "every upon him with great that and energy. As him. prospect pleases." It is, alas! also true enough that "man is vile" there; but no attempt has ever really been made to reclaim him.

Of all the sources of its wealth, however, coal is likely to prove the greatest, if properly worked. It is true the quality of the of the firm here will now, it is understood, this. mineral is inferior to the product of our English coal fields, but there is reason to believe that the supply is practically inexhaustible. In a report reproduced in these columns on Wednesday last, from the N. C. Daily News, is given a translation of a note—on—tho Formosa coal-fields by a Chinese expert. He was appointed to make it by the higher authorities at Fukien, and it is satisfactory to observe an indication on their part to work the Kelung Collieries more efficiently by the introduction of machinery: The Chinese are so slow to move in any new direction, so loth to leave the groove in which they have heretofore travelled, that it is worthy of notice when they exhibit any desire to adopt European appliances in their industries. As I yet they have not got further than the report of their commissioner; but as he appears to consider that the present mining operations nish explanation. are badly conducted, and the profits arising therefrom very small as the result, they may ultimately arrive at a decision that it will be Santander. worth while to introduce mining machinery. The mines at present worked lie very near the surface, and are not carried inward any distance. The seams, too, are only about three feet thick. It is most probable that by boring below the rock strata a better quality of coal, and in thicker seams, would bo discovered. Of course such work would be speculative, but there is fair ground to believe that valuable mines might thus be opened. The sinkings at Sandwell Park. in Staffordshire, have been carried to an immense depth, and, spite of several disappointments, coal found at last; but drinks. it is scarcely reasonable to expect the Chinese to start such a work as that. Nor is it likely that any such formidable experiment would prove necessary; athick coal measure would. doubtless be struck at mo great depth. At poor, and consequently less remunerative to Want of capital, equally with lack of enterprise, operates in keeping back the development of the collieries in the Kelung district. The master miners, or owners, are not wealthy enough to purchase powerful and expensive machinery, much less to sink capital in trial borings, however successful they might promise to turn out. If, however, the Government chose to take up the sendant or not, and if not, whether he had made matter and open out the mines there would himself liable by writing a certain letter which being no further evidence, the defendant was be a speedy change for the better in the prospects of the community. One disadvantage which the miners have to contend. with, however, according to the report. might and ought to be very speedily reeven and convenient readway for easier transport of the coal from the mines. Were this provided, the profits, it is reported, would be greatly enhanced. By the proper development of its "black diamonds," and the augmentation thereby of the wealth and BEFORE THE HON. CHIEF-JUSTICE (SIE JOHN prosperity of the people, the Chinese Government would do much to strengthen their hold on Formosa. Their tenure, as we noticed lately, of the island is somewhat precarious, and they would do wisely to lose no time in putting their house in order. And by such a course as that above indicated. one step would be taken towards the accomplishment of a very necessary proceeding.

An attempt at extortion, under rather aggra vated circumstances, the victim being a lady, was made the other day by the owners of a licensed sampan. The lady, it seems, hired the boat to convey her to a steamer, in the belief that she would be charged the ordinary fare, 10 cents. Much to her surprise, and possibly consternation, the boat-people demanded to know, when about midway-between the wharf and the steamer, what she intended paying them, and refused to proceed on learning that only the legitimate amount would be forthcoming. Fortunately they were unable to carry their point, through the determination of their passenger not to be forced into complying with their exaction; but the ruse would undoubtedly have succeeded only too well with many less resolute people. There is too much reason to fear the dodge has been worked before, and the culprits have escaped notice, owing to the passengers having no opportunity of coming on shore to complain. Like Falstaff, most Englishmen object to do anything, especially part with dollars, on compulsion, and some of the Chinese sharpers have yet to understand this. Doubtless ......Mr. C. D. Moss, Japan Gazette they will also have their due reward. The REGISTRAR-GENERAL will, it is to be hoped, hear of and inquire fully into the matter. Itis stated that the number of the sampan was on the Praya.

> An attack was made on Mountain Lodge on Wednesday night last, by thieves, who carried away the whole of the lightning conductor, even to the three feet fork on the top, the value of which was over $15. No trace of the missing property has yet been discovered.

Owing to failing health, Mr. George Hoard, one of the heat known and generally liked residents in this colony, has been compelled to depart for Europe. He left by the French Mail yesterday, to the regret of his numerous friends. It is to be hoped that a change of air will speedily effect his restoration to health, and that he will soon return to Hongkong.

There are still families in the Union whose claim of birth is admitted on all hands, and who obtain from it a very distinct, though indescribable social precedence and ascendancy, but there is no family now using or claiming a title of nobility, the single American family which possesses one having, except in English peerages, laid it aside. Lord Fairfax in Maryland is only Mr. Fairfax, a citizen in good esteem. Denmark, however, possesses a titled class, and if her Radical leaders will read. French and English history, they will see that the only way to kill titles is to protect them from multiplication, and suffer them to die out. All Englishmen recollect with mingled shame and amusement how hard Parliament strove to suppress the use of territorial titles by Roman Catholic Bishops, and how the law failed, the very members who voted for the Bill using the Hongkong Hotel Company's Shares-345 per titles on their letters. A Protestant people wild with annoyance and excisement, could not put down distinctively Catholic titles, even by legislation. The English penalties may seem to Danish observers too feeble for the end which it was sought to secure, but they will hardly bed able to go farther than the French Terrorists did, and the Terrorists failed as completely as the English House of Commons. They swept uway privileges, many of them involving rights of contract, without a struggle; they altered the laws regulating the devolution of property without a serious contest; they abolished the noble in such fashion that no aristocratic Chamber has been able to accure real power-i France; but the effect to do away with titles. though made in frantic carnest, altogether failed. During two years, to bear a title or use a title as a mode of address, was to invite sentence of death at the hands either of the executioner or of the mob, and during many years the practice was legally prohibited; butth titles remained nevertheless, and if historical. are as much used and as much valued in France as ever. CRAW rudeness, and the protection is sufficient. As they convey no privilege, it is worth no man's while to assail them, except with argument or ridicule; and argument and ridicule have always been powerless against social habits which any class has, or thinks it has, a strong interest in maintaining. The Danish Radicals will fail, just as the French Radicals failed; and while failing, will have wasted the force which, wisely applied, might have abolished all the privileges which are roully injurious to those who do not possess them, and which they, from

Extracts. AT THE OLD GATE.

And so we have nict here again, love: Here Is my hand once more: And with it the heart, now stricken-So proud in the days of yore. I know not how much that I loved you, When that word was spoken by me limt sundered our lives that night, dear, And sent you over the sen.

liere I have est all alone, luve, In the first fresh bours of Spring, When the blackbird filled the twilight With the songe that it used to sing In the golden fall of that Autumn That huried my heart's delight: But never a song could I sing, love, In the calm of the falling night.

have waited long by this gate, love, By the gleam of the days of old, When the sunsets of Sunmer came down, love. On their wings of amber and gold, And lingered amongst the tassels Of that bright laburaum tree; There was glory above, mid the branches, But never a gleam for me.

You thought that my heart was cold, love, " I knew that it seemed so then: But maidens of seventeen years, dear. Are not to be judged with men. There's a beauty of trust we must sour to. There's a love to which we must grow And these years have unsaid that word, dear, That I spoke to you long ago.

There's a lingering kiss on my lins, love-It has lain since yours touched mine; There's a love in my life that is yearning To cling to your heart as its shrine; Ah! now you have taken that kiss love. And with it crushed out the past; I have waited long, long at the old gate-I have waited, but found you at last.

THE CHANCES OF LITERARY LIFE. "What will O'Connel do now?" asked an Irishman in Dublin after the Repealer had been turned out of his seat for Clare, and when it was thought for the moment that his career was at an end. "Do!" was the an-"What can he do now, barring he takes to drink?" Substitute "literature" for "drink," and that is the answer which five men out of six in a club window would give to an inquiry about one of their own companions who happened to be brought into difficulties about matters of £. s. d. He has but three alternatives—this is generally the _drift_of_the observation_upon a case of this description—The Times, the turf, or a hansom cab; that is, to turn scribbler, blackleg, or ing of melancholy predominates, as in those jarvey; and, as Lady Mary Wortley said of soft and somewhat sad lines of Carew, which her cousin Harry Fielding, it is the toss-up of a shilling whether he shall be a hackney writer or a hackney coachman.—Gentleman's Magazine.

THE TWO-BREATHS. - ---

So far as pure air is concerned, some hints nre given by Canon Kingsley which may be useful even to the poor, or to employers who oure for the poor. He describes what be palls "the two breaths," and their effects. The two are, of course, the breath you take in-which "is, or ought to be, pure air, composed, on the whole, of oxygen and nitrogen, with a minute portion of carbonic acid" It would be a task to scrutinise at length the -and the breath you give out, which "is an varied lyrical treasures of the Elizabethan impure air, to which has been added, among era, as we have received them from the pens other matters which will support life, an of Wither, Sir Henry Wotton, Donne, Cowley excess of carbonic acid." He then points out Sir. Philip. Sidney, Sir Robert Ayton, Sir that this carbonic acid gas, when warm, Walter Raleigh, and others. Raleigh was a is lighter than the air, and ascends; muster in the art of verse, though his fame and, when at the same temperature in this. Everybody, however, rememberas common air, is heavier than that air, and his reply to Marlowe's song of the "Passions descends, lying along the floor, "just ate Shepherd to his Love," beginning old brewers vats, as a stratum of poison, killing occasionally the men-who descend into Hence a word of admonition is addressed to those who think nothing of sleeping on the floor; and hence, as "the poor are apt in times of discress, to pawn their bedsteads and keep their beds," the friends of the poor are entreated never to let that happen, and to "keep the bedstead, whatever else may go, to save the sleeper from the carbonic acid on the floor."—Chamber's Journal.

THE ROOK'S BOAST. I feel entitled to observe that birds of my race are, in one respect at least, superior to both dogs and horses. These are, after all, the obedient slaves of man. Trained to obey time he was an old man, and none the better bis will, taught from earliest youth to acknowledge his superiority, they pass their existence for the most part in willing thraldom, ignorant of those free aspirations and that untrammelled liberty of which I and my the sweetest word-music that we possess .feathered comrades can truly boast. Not that this is equally applicable to all birds The parrot ignominiously seated upon his perch, looks to man for his daily pittance of food, screeches out that which they suppose to be his gratitude in inharmonious accents and seeks no higher aim than occasionally to imitate the tones and ...rds of his enslavers The starling, the magpie, and other kindred birds, from time to time own the dominion of man. The unhappy thrush too often languishes in his wicker cage, suspended before the cottage door of his unfeeling master; and even the crafty jackdaw frequently becomes the pet and plaything of the human race. But who ever heard of a tame My noble race loves, indeed, to domicile itself near the haunts of men; but this is rather with the object of proving to our young, by the force of daily contrast, our innate and immense superiority over the unfeathered bipeds who walk the earth from which they cannot rise, and pass a wingless life in a conceited belief in their own greatness. Often and often have I seen them walking near, though not as a rule beneath my native rookery, and wondered to mysel how such tame crawling creatures could have the arrogance to deem themselves the lords of that creation which contains so many pobler races.-" Whispers from Fairyland,

Is there not, or at least ought there no to be a code of eliquette for the kitchen a well as for the parlour; for conduct towards inferiors as well as equals? We make our plea for politeness in the kitchen on the following grounds :- 1. No lady can afford. for her own sake, to be otherwise than gentle. thoughtful, and courteous in the administration of konschold matters. If she reserves her best manners for the parlour, where so small a portion of the average American housekeeper's time is spent, it is likely that they will not always be easily put on. The habitual deportment leaves marks upon the countenance and the manner which no sudden effort can produce. And at housekeeping there are at best so many unexpected! occurrences, not always agreeable, that nothing but a habit of self-control and serenity can tide us over them creditably. Acbuted annually to Contributors, whether Sharecording to John Newton, it sometimes rolders or not, in proportion to the net amount requires more grace to bear the breaking of of Premia contributed by each, the remaining a china plate than the death of an only son: third being carried to Reserve Fund. and there is a good deal of truth under the seeming absurdity. Have we not all proved be experience that we bear with least equamimity the daily petty vexations which are unexpected and apparently unnecessary? But there are many small miseries to one great affliction, and if character is to be improved by tribulations, it must be mainly by those of every day the pin-pricks for which we are ashamed to demand sympathy. 2. For the sake of family comfort we must have comfort in the kitchen. Willing and unwilling service are readily distinguishable by every member of the household. We can all of us remember how the atmosphere of a dinner-party has been suddenly chilled by a few words of unnecessary blame to a servant. To mortify a person is not usually to reform him. On the other hand, how delightful to a guest are those homes where the relation of masters and servants are friendly; where shortcomings on the part of the latter are delicately excused in public, and judiciously investigated in private. I say, advisedly, investigated rather than reproved; for undeserved misfortune may happen alike to all, and there may be occasion for sympathy rather than blame. If Biddy has had bad news from over the sea, must we not take that into account when we find fault with the gravy? I think sometimes we do not remember sufficiently that those who serve us are not machines, but men and women of like passions, and sorrows, and tempers with ourselves. 3. For the sake of our servants Aggregate Capital ...... themselves we must pay them due politeness Humanity, says Bacon, is sooner won by courtesy than by real benefits. If one would make thorough and efficient servants out of raw material, it must be done by patience and long suffering, You say they are provokingly stupid; we will suppose they are; but if we have to deal with stupidity, let us use the means best adapted to it. Will intimidation succeed? Did you ever find that scolding made an order more intelligible, or caused anything but broken dishes and ill cooked dinners? Then try gentleness a little while; if that will not accomplish anything, send away your servant and try another. You cannot afford to lose your temper; and a person on whom persistent kindness is thrown away can render you no intelligent or permanent service. We put it to the common sense of our readers, whether selfpreservation, comfort, and duty, do not require of us a little more attention to kitchen etiquette? -- Scribner's Monthly. ENGLISH LYRICS.
